

PROFIT STACKING SECRETS

EXPLODE YOUR PROFITS BY STACKING SMALL IDEAS WITH SIMPLE ACTIONS!

Profit Stacking Secrets - By Mitch Russo

Introduction: From Nothing to Millions — The Journey Begins

When I first started in business, I had exactly zero of the things you're “supposed” to have:

- No money.
- No mentor.
- No plan.

Just a stubborn desire to build something that was mine. Something I could control. Something that would rise or fall based solely on my own efforts—not someone else's whims.

I chased five different ideas right out of the gate. You'd think I had a master plan—but no, I was just trying to survive. Ironically, the idea I believed had the lowest chance of success ended up becoming the cornerstone of my career.

If you're a listener of my podcast Your First Thousand Clients, you might already know this story: My partner and I quit our jobs, declared ourselves "in business," and within hours the very foundation of our new company crumbled beneath us. Not exactly a textbook launch.

Ninety days later, bruised but not beaten, we pivoted. We had a new product, no budget, and a wild plan. I became the president of our two-person company, which mostly meant doing everything short of janitorial duty—including dragging a folding table, a borrowed TV, and an ancient laptop to a trade show in New York City. We couldn't even afford a hotel. We crashed on couches across two boroughs, fueled by hope and cold pizza. Sound familiar?

It was in those scrappy early days that I learned how to truly stack profits. Not by raising prices. Not by chasing VC funding. But by mastering the art of finding leverage in small, strategic moves that compound over time.

That's when the ideas in this book first started to take shape—way back in 1985.

Fast forward: We grew that humble garage operation into a company with over 100 employees, more than $10 million in revenue, and total dominance in our niche. All because we kept stacking wins—one idea, one tactic, one move at a time.

Now, I'm sharing those same principles with you.

Here's my promise:

Apply even one or two of the ideas in this book, and you'll see an uptick in sales.

Apply a few more? You'll see more.

Stack them smartly? You might just create something life-changing.

You don't need a fortune, a fancy degree, or even years of experience. Most of what I share here is simple, effective, and doesn't require a massive budget. Some ideas are more advanced—those can wait. But others? You can start today.

So, here's the question: Are you willing to try?

Because if you are, and if you take this seriously, what happens next could be the most exhilarating ride of your life. There's nothing quite like building something from scratch—and watching it thrive.

Let's get started.

No matter what, tell me what you think, tell me how you've used this book and tell me how to make it even better!

Sincerely,

Mitch Russo

Organizing Your Systems:

This book is organized into sections. The first section is for tracking your financial and vital statistics. Start out with your current numbers and each month come back and add your numbers again. Not all numbers will go up every month, but this is the way to see your progress as you work on your company.

The rest of the book is designed to be read over quickly and show you all the options available to you that will boost sales and profits. Some you will want to try immediately, others are more “stage two” tactics and still others won’t apply to you.

The most important thing to do is to start. Try one thing. Reach out to a potential Joint Venture (JV) partner and find out if they have any interest in working with you, and get something started. That’s just one suggestion. There are hundreds of great places to start generating more revenue, getting more exposure, building more partnerships, gaining more clients and growing your company like a pro.

Any questions?

Company Self-Assessment

1. Affiliate Marketing Programs:

Affiliate Marketing should be at the top of your list for getting new clients, for two important reasons. One: There is very little out of pocket expense to get affiliate partners and Two: It can explode your customer and prospect lists very quickly. The best way to get Affiliate Marketing Partners is to register with Affiliate Marketing companies like ClickBank.com and other who provide aggregation of offers (like you) and of promoters, who you are seeking.

Do you have Affiliate Marketing Partnerships? If so:

List all recent affiliate marketing partners in the last 12 months:

Partner #1 _____
Partner #2 _____
Partner #3 _____

Date of last campaign and including list size (if known)

Partner #1 _____
Partner #2 _____
Partner #3 _____

Conversion through each partner, show percentage.

Partner #1 _____
Partner #2 _____
Partner #3 _____

List offer with each affiliate marketing partner.

Partner #1 _____
Partner #2 _____
Partner #3 _____

Do you have a public affiliate signup page on your website ? Y/N _____

Answer the following questions ONLY if yes:

Which affiliate management software do you use? Happy? Y/N

Do you have all the artwork (sky scrapers, banners in 3 sizes, logos, etc)

Spell out your affiliate offer exactly

Do you offer rebill percentages? How much, how long, and at what trigger?

Do you have a separate marketing program to your affiliates? Explain.

How often do you spiff your affiliate network?

How often do you change your affiliate offer?

2. Internal Capabilities:

Most entrepreneurs start out doing everything. As you begin to gain traction and your revenue is increasing, the MOST IMPORTANT THING you must do is find a way to get help. If you don't you will be spending 12 hours a day working IN your business and not ON it, which will lead to burn out, broken relationships and eventually bankruptcy both financially, spiritually and personally. GET HELP NOW while you can still train someone to offload you and let them do it even better than you can.

Do you or someone on your staff write all the copy for your messages and platforms?

Do you or someone on your staff handle all the social media advertising; strategy and execution?

Do you or someone on your staff do all the selling of your products and services?

Do you or someone on your staff handle connection requests and communications on LinkedIn?

Is there someone other than you that delivers the products/services you sell? How many people?

Do you or someone on your staff work with affiliates and JV partners?

note: If the answer to all of the above is "I do" then you will need to consider adding to your team.

3. Joint Ventures:

Like an affiliate partner, a joint venture partner is a company who will promote your products for a share of the revenue and may want you to promote their products to your list as well. The most significant difference between an affiliate partner and a JV partner will likely be the personal relationship you build over time with your partners. They will become like family, there will be parties and events you attend and deepen the relationship and usually those who perform the best for you will “win” big prizes. Almost all significant JV programs have a reward structure where those top producers will win significant prizes. I have seen Ferraris and BMWs offered and won in these type of contests.

(Where you have another company promote your product to their list)

Have you done Joint Ventures this past year and how many?

Have you created all the materials required for your JV partner to market your products i.e. email series, artwork, and ads?

Do you use affiliate tracking software to show each JV partner what their list has generated in revenue?

Do you create spiffs, sales contests and prizes for your JV partners?

Are you a member of a JV group, program, or mastermind?

4. Speaking From Stage:

Some people say that that Speaking from Stage is just about the most powerful promotional activity you can do. But, it's not for beginners. Here's why: It's expensive and you need to have a large audience to promote your event to. The expense is all about getting your event staged; venue, transportation, labor, and 3rd party vendors that cover everything from A/V services to food/beverage and more. In addition, it will take many of your existing staff to help on-site, so that must be taken into consideration as a real cost of doing business. But another way to get started is to speak at other people's events, even if you have to pay for a sponsorship for the right to do so, is worth it.

How much on average are you paid to speak at an event?

How many paid events a year do you speak at?

When you speak, do you also offer a follow up coaching program to solidify & sustain your message/topic?

List the speaking bureaus who bring you business:

How do you promote your speaking services?

Do you pay to speak as a sponsor?

What product are you promoting when you do sponsor an event and pay to present?

5. Membership Sites:

A membership program is a great way to create a steady stream of recurring revenue monthly. When thinking about what you can offer to your members, remember that many people drop out after just a few months and unless you are offering a subscription to something that requires constant updating, it's important to design the experience for your members as carefully as possible to keep them engaged, to keep the value high - all of this during challenging times in our economy. Make this part of your strategy if you believe you have an on-going offering that's worth the money and provides great value to your clients!

Do you have a membership program? Y/N

What do you charge per month or per year?

What is the average length of your member's paid participation?

Do you link your membership program to a course or paid program or service?

Do you sell something inside your membership program as an upsell? cross sell?

What are you selling and how much do you charge?

6. Courses:

I love courses as a way to engage clients and generate revenue. I also love courses as an upsell opportunity. Once you have built your first successful course, create your second one. Think about what you can sell to course buyers that will enhance their experience. For example, consider offering a coaching program to help those who can afford it, to make progress more rapidly. Then, after they buy coaching, consider their next course and what that should be to enhance their journey on their path to success. Make sure your courses have links built in to your other products and services so your clients always know what you have available.

List the courses do you sell and price points of each:

Course 1: _____

Course 2: _____

Course 3: _____

Does each course lead to an upsell?

Is coaching included with each course? If yes, how many sessions?

Are your courses progressive, i.e. lead from one to the next or stand-alone?

Would you benefit from a course series instead of a 1x sale?

What LMS platform are you currently using and what does it cost per month/year?

Do you include membership in a program as part of your course sale?

Do you have a Facebook group for each course you sell?

7. Products:

List each product you offer with price, and in what format: i.e. Group Coaching program, eBooks, Upsells, Hi ticket, courses, etc.

Indicate if your product(s) includes coaching, email updates, live event seats, etc.

List each electronic only product i.e. webinar series, paced learning or virtual training system with price and duration.

Indicate if those include coaching, email updates, live seminar seats and follow up.

List each live program you run each year or are planning to run.

Indicate duration, price and what it comes with in terms of follow on materials.

What does this show you about your product offerings?

8. Live Events:

In 2008, Tony Robbins, Chet Holmes and Mitch Russo launched an event in Las Vegas, filled it with 500 people and hosted 15 speakers in addition to Tony and Chet, which became the basis of a brand new company called Business Breakthroughs, International. This is both rare and risky, yet Tony and a few others may be the only ones to ever successfully pull that off. And yes, it was successful. Traditionally, most people work up to a live event after already having years of experience delivering their training programs across the board to individuals, companies and groups. Even then, the next step would be to first sponsor an event and THEN consider your own. If you have done that, use this checklist to see what you are missing, refine your offering and make more profits!

Do you run live programs? (if no, skip this section)

How do you get a seat sold (i.e. email, video presentation, sales force, etc)

What do you charge per seat?

Do you have a 2nd person tag-along rate?

Do you record, package and sell the event to those who are in the room, at a discount, while the event is taking place?

Do you offer the program to the same list for those who didn't attend?

Price? Urgency bonus?

Do you offer the next event at the event you are presenting at?

Do you have an upsell event at every event?

What else do you typically sell at live events?

Do you offer a simulcast after sell-out at live events?

Do you sell recordings or notes to attendees while still at the event?

Do you sell recordings or notes to those who did not attend the event?

Do you speak at live events as a sponsor or with a rev share?

How many events per year do you speak at?

Do you have access to the list of attendees BEFORE they event or after the event?

What is the average size of the audience?

Do you sell product in the back of the room?

What do you sell and for how much?

When you sell at live events, what percentage do you pay the event owner?

Do you have a follow-up program with event attendees?

Do you go back to event coordinators and offer to mail their lists for profit share?

9. Video Presentations:

Go Live on all platforms as often as possible. Self-confidence is the only reason most people don't do it more often, and that means there's a bigger opportunity for YOU to do so. Don't worry if you only have a few people on your "live" FB event, you can easily promote your event after it's done and reach thousands of people for a small amount of money. Some people say it will replace webinars because it's so effective at getting viewers to pay attention and stay with it. If you aren't now, start - and use some of the great services available to multi-cast to many platforms simultaneously.

Are you "going live" on social media?

What software are you using to go live on as many platforms at once?

After you go live, are you promoting your livestream?

What specifically are you doing with YouTube; Your Strategy?

Are you actively building your channel and publish new episodes/videos regularly?

Are you monetizing YouTube with advertising, where YouTube pays you monthly for exposure?

10. Your Book(s:)

The replacement for your business card is supposedly now your book. Well, that may be true but if that's all you use it for, you will be leaving large sums of money on the table. Books are some of the best vehicles ever for both creating authority, building trust and showcasing your skills and capabilities. There are so many unique things you can do with your book and so many ways to showcase your abilities using your book as the start. Don't yet have a book? OK, start now! :-)

Have you written one or more books that support your core business?

Did you self-publish your book or did you go through a publisher?

Are you promoting your own books through your website? Podcast? Blog?

Are you giving away your books when you speak at events or Masterminds?

Have you leveraged your book release to get on more Podcasts?

Have you created a "Free book, just pay S/H offer?"

When you released your book, did you have an accompanying course or program to go with it for free?

Do you currently give your book away as a means of getting appointments or distancing yourself from your competition?

Have you used your book to generate continuous public relations exposure?

11. Summits:

As of this moment, there are summits going on almost every day. The reason is that they are successful. The process is simple to understand: You invite a bunch of people to present their wisdom and you record it. They do it for promotional reasons and to build their own email list. Then, as the Summit owner, you build your own list quick rapidly and can offer a bundled package of all the recordings at a low price to offset the cost of running the summit. You get all the names of everyone who attended and can now market freely to them. It's likely you will make a small profit too, but the real goal of the summit is to build your list.

Have you run a "free" summit where you invite speakers to share their wisdom to build your list?

How many Speakers do you have?

How many days did it run?

What was your offer (library of speaker sessions)?

How much revenue did you generate?

Was it profitable for you?

12. Challenges:

A “Challenge” is nothing more than a live class you offer to your prospects to help them accomplish something that would be valuable to them. The Challenge focus is your expertise. If you help people market on LinkedIn, you can have a 10 day challenge to get your profile rewritten, your connection request system built and even make contact with a target audience and potentially book new clients. That’s just an example; you can do all that and more. What can you “challenge” your prospect to do that will get them more deeply involved with you, your company, your content and the program you would like to enroll them into at the end of the challenge?

Have you ever run a “challenge” to acquire new leads?

How many days did it run?

How many people signed up for your challenge?

How many people completed the challenge?

How many did you convert to your paid program?

How much revenue came from your challenge?

13. Webinars:

If you are not running webinars now, it’s worth doing so. There’s a lot of great training out there to help you get your webinar written and scripted. There’s also a fantastic array of webinar software systems that are inexpensive and effective at managing the entire process. Once you have dialed in your webinar, and it’s producing buyers regularly, you can record it and play it back on demand, so you don’t need to do them live anymore. When you are at this stage, the revenue is only limited by how quickly you can scale your ad dollars. It’s one of those things that require considerable effort to get your webinar working well and highly productive, but it’s worth it.

Are you doing webinars now?

What do you offer and how much does it cost?

Do you currently offer a webinar or a series of webinars?

How many per month?

Which webinar platform do you use?

Are they regularly scheduled or automated? How long are they?

Have you experimented with different length webinars, what works best for you?

Are they free and open to the public?

If paid, how much do you charge?

Are they offered to your clients on existing programs?

Are they an upsell to clients on existing paid programs?

List them with the duration of each, the cost of each and the upsell or product sold in each.

How do you get prospects into a webinar? Free? Cost?

What is the show up rate in your webinars? (track monthly)

How do you manage the reminder process for prospects before they show up in webinars?

Have you recorded the webinars and created a product from a group of them?

If yes, what do you charge? Have you priced it and then use it as a bonus for purchasing something else?

14. Advertising:

This is how empires are built; on the platforms of others. Unless of course, you own the platform, then you are the empire and others will seek you out to their gain. The biggest problem with traditional advertising in the past has been accountability. How do I know that my advertising dollars are being placed properly, in the right places and at the right time. There's an old saying that people can make money with advertising because only half of it has to actually perform, but most advertisers don't know which half. Now, we live in a time where real-time tracking is now eliminating the guess work and delivering tangible, trackable results. If you are at the stage where you've exhausted your online advertising opportunities and want to try something new, pick something you are familiar with and learn more about it. Radio is more effective than most people would believe, but they don't know where to start. Think about where you can spend a little and learn a lot.

Do you spend any money on advertising other than social media i.e. Radio, print, podcast?

How much are you spending on each media type?

Radio _____

Print _____

Television _____

Podcast Sponsorship _____

What is your Return on Investment (ROI) on your advertising per channel?

Radio _____

Print _____

Television _____

What is your current budget and why is it that particular amount?

If you could make your advertising more effective, would you increase your budget?

15. Masterminds:

Masterminds can be incredibly profitable and very sticky. A great mastermind can charge upwards of $25K per year for membership and keep members coming back for many years. There's a certain magic around the Mastermind leader, who's already been successful and attracts complimentary members who can vastly multiply the value of the time spent while Masterminding. Masterminds are hard to start if you don't have a customer base who has already benefited from your offerings. Many Masterminds are upsells from other programs like Membership Sites and Coaching programs. Consider your own Mastermind when you've graduated enough people from your other programs to recruit from that first group of 9 - 12 people.

Do you attend a paid mastermind regularly?

Do you have your own mastermind?

What is the format: remote, live, or both?

What is the frequency of your meetings?

What is the duration of your mastermind i.e. 3 months, 6 months, one year?

What do you charge members to join?

How many people do you have in your mastermind currently?

Are you happy with your mastermind and enjoy leading it?

16. Space:

This refers to physical space. As you are considering the questions below, ask yourself what functions in your business can be done remotely? Is it absolutely imperative that you add more overhead at this time? Working remotely has become extremely common now and many companies are completely re-evaluating their need for physical space. Yet, many companies must have a physical presence and if you do then you must be doing really well and that's fantastic.

Do you need more physical space to expand? What part of the business needs more space and why?

Have you looked into outsourcing parts of the business you are currently involved with now? Which parts?

Did you do a cost analysis of the outsourcing vs. doing it inside?

17. Creative assets:

I am not an advocate of adding overhead and I don't think you should. However, it makes no sense for you, as the business owner, to do these tasks personally, unless you have talent and love doing them. Otherwise, outsource them all. There are so many options now for outsourcing tasks that there's no need to do anything that is truly outside your wheelhouse if you have the cash flow to move forward with your endeavors. So, find good contractor and build, build, build!

Do you need more writing talent to create an already defined marketing program you can't get done?

Do you need any other creative talent that is currently limiting you?

Do you use an agency to execute your creative needs? Which one?

Does your agency have clients and have you asked your agency if you can market to them with a profit-share?

18. Web Site:

Who does your website maintenance i.e. standard webmaster tasks?

How often is your web site updated?

How do you drive traffic to the site?

Do you have Squeeze pages that are dedicated to specific campaigns?

Do you run google analytics? (Please be ready to show me when we are together)

How many backlinks do you have?

How do you get backlinks and do you use an organic or bulk strategy?

How old is your web site design?

Have you run a heat map on your site to see where people are clicking?

When is the last time you had a professional web site evaluation?

SEO - Do you know what your keywords are for your marketplace?

SEO - Do you actively work to optimize your posts and pages when you create content?

19. Blog:

Do you have a blog, which is updated regularly? Daily? X times a week? Weekly? 2x a month? Monthly?

Do you collect subscribers on your blog? Is your blog part of your website or is it separate?

Do you notify all your social media followers every time the blog is updated? Y/N and if N, why?

Do you have an active SEO program? Explain what you are doing?

Do you promote your site using any particular services i.e. link services?

Do you guest blog on other's sites?

Is your blog syndicated?

Do you have guest bloggers? Who? How many? How often?

Do you link to affiliate programs from your blog i.e. earn affiliate income from 4rd parties by recommending other products?

20. E-books:

How many e-books have you published?

Do you charge for them? Y/N/Some

List those that are free and the ones you charge for, how much for each?

e-book 1

e-book 2

e-book 3

Have you set prices on your e-books and used them as high value giveaway's for product bonuses?

Do you give away e-books free in exchange for getting a name/email/phone # on your sign-up forms?

Have you used 3rd party distribution for your e-books?

Do you have an Amazon-only e-book program?

21. Audible Audio:

Audio books have never been more popular. If you have the capacity to do so, read your book out loud and get that uploaded to Audible.com so you can sell your audiobook along with your printed versions. I have discovered that audiobooks double my revenue on book sales and actually encourages making it to the end of the book. If you don't have the time or inclination to read it yourself, go on Fiverr.com and find someone who will do it for you. The prices are relatively low and the quality is very high, but get this done, you won't be sorry.

Do you have an audio program offered on audio sites like Audible.com?

What have been the results of having these on audio sites? Sales? Leads? Revenue?

Have you defined other audio programs you can offer? List them.

Have you investigated posting free audio books on the hundreds of sites which promote free audio books?

22. Coaching Program:

Most people who have never hired a coach don't really understand the immense value a coach can provide. Remember, you don't have to be an expert at anything, you simply have to be one step beyond your clients to help them reach the next level, and that will be very valuable to them. If you are not working with a coach now or have ever worked with a coach before, it will be a great experience for you to buy a few sessions and see what it is like. Then, think about how your own coaching can enhance your product offerings and drive revenue rapidly.

Are you currently generating revenue as a one-on-one coach?

Do you have a group coaching program?

How many sessions do you give away free when someone buys your product?

Do you charge hourly or by end result?

How much do you charge for coaching?

Do you sell a coaching package i.e. #hours for a set fee?

How many coaches do you have?

Are you limited by the number of coaches you have?

What stops you from offering a coaching program if you have the products and services to support it?

23. Podcast:

Podcasting is still in its infancy and it's becoming more mainstream now than ever before. You can start a podcast for under $300 and if you are resourceful, you can also produce it yourself but... I don't recommend it. It's better to get a producer if you are pressed for time and it can be done for just $100 an episode, so why not pay to get it done! Starting your own show could be a great way to target your potential guests as your ideal clients!

Do you currently have a podcast? What's the name?

How often do you publish an episode?

How many downloads a month do you get now?

How many interviews have you done?

Do you have a producer who edits your audio & builds your show pages on your website?

Do you love doing a podcast?

Do you appear on other people's podcasts?

24. Podcast Monetization:

Most people don't use their podcast to make money. I think that's a big mistake because there are so many ways to use your show to make money that you simply must do it if are serious about podcasting. Review the list below and see what you can do quickly and easily to generate some income.

Are your listeners considered your potential customers/clients?

Are your guest considered your potential customers/clients?

Do you see an increase in downloads every month?

If not, do you know why?

Do you offer advertising?

Do you syndicate your show?

Do you have a professional producer?

Do you post your fully transcribed shows on your "main" website? i.e. Your authority site?

Are you monitoring your google rankings and keywords?

Have you offered a paid product or service of your own to your listeners?

Do you have a compelling way to collect email addresses your listeners?

25. Amazon Stores:

Did you know you can set up a web page and add products from Amazon which people can buy and make you a commission? There are many videos on YouTube that show you how to do this, and you can even add a “reading list” to your blog and show your readers what books you love. If they buy a book from your blog on the Amazon site, everything else they buy during that shopping excursion will also make you a commission. Is this a super high priority if it’s not your main business? No. But it’s a nice add-on and easy to do. Even if it produces an extra $XX a month, why not?

Do you currently have an Amazon Store?

What frequency are you adding new content to your Amazon Store i.e. product reviews, new products, etc.?

How much revenue do all your Amazon Stores provide monthly?

What expenses (total) do you have to run your stores i.e. SEO, content, licensing, etc.?

26. Shopify Stores:

Do you have a shopify store?

Do you sell physical products?

Do you create your own products?

If yes, do you know your loaded cost of goods i.e. not just materials but overhead/labor too?

How do you promote your store?

What market do you serve i.e. vertical market, specific audience, etc.?

What do you think you need to double your sales in your store?

27. Your Quality of Life:

This is why you are alive today, to live a quality life. Everyone has their own definition of a quality lifestyle and these questions are here to help you consider each area of your life while you build your empire because, after all, what's the point if you can't move toward a wonderful lifestyle? So spend some time thinking more about these questions and if you spot an area that you would like to improve, then let that happen too.

What are your health goals in the next 90 days?

How can you improve your eating habits in the next 90 days?

What are your relationship goals in the next 90 days?

Do you live in your ideal location and if not, why?

What are your short term (90 days) and long term (1 yr) goals for your business?

Do you use a system of time management that has worked for you?

Who is someone who you follow and learn from in the last 12 months?

What do you feel is missing from your life that you desire or need?

28. Limitations:

Many people have limitations in their lives and sometimes overcoming those limitations are what makes them stronger. This is simply an invitation to consider your perceived or real limitations as something to overcome. For many, those limitations and overcoming them have become the basis for a whole new business.

Besides the usual answers of “time” and money” I want to know what your real limitations are to growing this business.

Describe your situation:

What could inspire you about your limitations?

If you were coaching someone with the exact same limitations as you have, what advice would you give them?

A Final Word

If you have implemented at least one of the strategies I've covered in this book, you have seen the power of the old saying: "Small hinges swing big doors" which is why you bought this in the first place.

As your company grows and from time to time, stay in touch. You now have access to a very experienced business coach who can help you to compress time; get done in weeks or just a few months what can normally take years to accomplish.

That's what I do every day, I help business owners with strategy and tactics that can rapidly grow their company – even when nothing has before. You can say what people say about me after we've worked together at my Testimonials Page on my website.

If you are in a position to spend a little money to save a lot of time, and uplevel yourself in ways you might never have imagined, then let me know and we can talk about what you need.

There are almost 400 articles, interviews and profiles of business strategies included over 200 podcast episodes with some amazing business owners and thought leaders all right here at MitchRusso.com.

In addition, I have published two books, so far:

The Invisible Organization - How Ingenious CEOs Are Creating Thriving, Virtual Companies

Power Tribes – How Certification Can Explode Your Business

Coach Elevation – Enable Happier Clients, Higher Fees and a Scalable Coaching Business

Sacred Profits – From Meditation to Domination – Bringing mindfulness to the organization

All were written based on my personal experience and help define my executive level consulting work with growing companies usually in the 8-figure range. The ideas and strategies in both books are useful to most small business owners and should be studied for the purpose of idea generation and process creation.

If you would like to drop me a note and tell me how this book has assisted you, what suggestions you have for improvement or just to let me know what's on your mind, I certainly would appreciate that. You can reach me directly at: mitch@mitchrusso.com

Thank you again for buying and studying this little manual, I hope it brings you something wonderful.
